BRISTOL TOWNSHIP MAN PLEADS GUILTY TO THREE CHARGES

Ralph Herman, 20, Emilie Rd.,
Sentenced To Pay Costs;
Jail Term Suspended

LEVIN GIVEN JAIL TERM

Three Paroles Are Granted By Both Judge Keller and Judge Boyer

DOYLESTOWN, Nov. 27.—A Bristol Township man was before Judge Calvin S. Boyer in December criminal court yesterday when Ralph Herman, 20, Emilie Road, pleaded guilty to burglary, larceny and receiving stolen goods.

Private John P. Mitchell of the South Langhorne sub-station, who investigated the case testified the defendant admitted stealing clothing, auto accessories, tools and gasoline between September 25 and October 25 during about ten or 12 raids on automobiles.

Most of the stolen articles were kept in Herman's car, including a topcoat, jacket, defroster and other booty.

Private Mitchell said Herman was accompanied by a boy, named Curtis Henry, 15, who was heard in juvenile court here and ordered returned to the Philadelphia authorities.

The gasoline was siphoned out of cars, Private Mitchell testified.

Vernon Seltzer, 24, Morrisville, testified the floor boards in his car had been taken out and the battery was missing. "I received the battery back next Sunday from the police barracks," said Seltzer, who was a former Doylestown cut-rate drug store manager here.

Russell Southard, 35, 59 Andrew avenue, Trenton, N. J., testified the radio was taken from his car.

The defendant, Herman, got acquainted with Curtis Henry, who was on probation from the Philadelphia courts, while employed on a poultry farm.

The defendant, who owned a car and said he wanted things to fix it up, testified Henry suggested taking the articles and it was an easy way to get them.

He has never been in any previous trouble nor arrested before. "None of the cars was locked and I didn't have to break into them," said the defendant.

Character witnesses included Marian Clappian and Nicholas Carver and two others.

Mrs. Cecelia Herman, step-mother of the defendant, who has raised him since he was four years old, said the boy was probably under the impression he could get something for nothing.

"When he met this boy he went out every night," said his step-mother. "He had only evenings off and worked on Sundays. His father suggested that he should not go out every night," said Mrs. Herman.

Private Mitchell said the defendant readily admitted the crimes but that the younger boy, Curtis Henry, would not tell a thing.

Judge Boyer sentenced Herman to pay the costs of prosecution and serve not less than one month nor more than six months in jail.

Snow Promised For Holiday

The weather contrived today to make Pennsylvania's observance of Thanksgiving "traditional" in every sense of the word as more snow and freezing temperatures were promised for tomorrow's holiday.

That was the prospect as central and northeastern residents dug themselves out of snow-drifts from yesterday's freak storm which, slicing eastward from the Texas Panhandle, left a maximum snowfall of 15 inches in the Pocono Mountains.

Streets and highways throughout the State were ice-coated or deep in snow last night. Driving rain froze as it struck, leaving many cross-State motorists helpless until highway clearing crews got on the job.

Motorists moved slowly on Pennsylvania's high-speed turnpike, which suffered with other main arteries of traffic.

New York State Police today issued a bulletin giving weather conditions in that State:

Northern New York: 3 to 5 inches of snow. Snowing and slippery roads.

Western New York: Roads slippery. Central New York: One and one-half to five inches of snow. Roads slippery.

South Central New York: Four to five inches of snow. Mist falling.

Southeastern New York: One inch of snow and raining.

Eastern New York: Four to seven inches of snow.

Other weather reports stated: Massachusetts: Six to 12 inches of snow.

New Hampshire: Five inches of snow.

Connecticut: One to eight inches of snow.

Britain's War Program Retarded

London, Nov. 29.—A frank admission that the German aerial blitzkrieg has "retarded" Britain's expanding war program was made in the House of Commons today by Arthur Greenwood, minister without portfolio and a member of the war cabinet.

Greenwood, however, disclosed the government was still confident of victory, and predicted that North America will soon become the "second arsenal" of a British Empire fighting desperately for its existence.

FLEETWINGS OPENS TRAINING SCHOOL FOR DEFENSE WORK

Mechanics Training Course

School is Sponsored by Bristol
Public School Board As Part of System

So keenly rapt in their activities were the 25 young men following the aircraft mechanics training course in the service hangar at Fleetwings, Inc., yesterday, that they failed to observe recess period, and actually continued to bend over their work-benches until the end of the eight-hour day.

This group, the first contingent of young men aged 18 to 25 years, who are taking advantage of the riveting and sheet metal training courses, entered the classes on Monday morning. The aircraft mechanics training course located at Fleetwings, Inc., is affiliated with the United States government emergency training plan in national defense activities. These classes are part of the Bristol Vocational School, the plan for which originated with local industrial firms in conjunction with Bristol borough school board. Warren P. Snyder, superintendent of Bristol public schools, and David Hertler, principal of Bristol high school, have both been active in organizing the vocational training courses here.

The plan is to increase the size of the class at the Fleetwings establishment by 25 on each of the three succeeding Mondays. This will the first 100 students be acquired. After a period of time the second hundred will be enrolled.

One requirement is that the men have a high school education or its equivalent. The "equivalent" it is explained, should be some mechanical trade training, with the students showing some manipulative ability.

It is intended to train the young men of the area so that local firms and the community in general will be in a position to hire them. The age limit, 18-25, is definitely determined, because state officials in charge, "if at the age of 25 years the men have not found their vocations, they are not so well adapted to aircraft work. The enthusiasm of young men is needed."

Three rooms on the ground floor are directly applied to mechanics of the Thanksgiving has long included the custom of feasting, a custom as old as human-kind. Millenniums before the Pilgrim fathers sent hunters out to obtain meat for the first Thanksgiving in America, the rich and the powerful of the ancient world were dazling their contemporaries with feasts of unparalleled magnificence. Through the countless generations since that time the habit has persisted.

ENOUGH TO EAT

America today has no little ground for thanksgiving in the single material thought that magnificent as were the feasts of Belshazzar, Alexander, Lucullus, Nero and others, the average American family today has resources for feasting which the ancients could not have purchased with all their wealth. Any Bristol grocer can supply a better quality and a far greater variety of food than ever before in the history of the world. The ancients had a limited area from which to draw. An American family has at its command the foods of all the world processed with a skill the cooks of other centuries lacked.

Here surely is cause for thanksgiving. America is a land of great plenty and of the highest quality. Here is concentrated for the first time in the history of human-kind the machinery of production which gives men, women and children more than they can consume. There are still many material problems to be solved. But the most pressing of all human problems—enough to eat—has been solved.

Certainly any American can be humbly grateful for the social and economic system under which this decisive victory has been gained and fiercely determined that the system shall be preserved for still further victories contributing to the welfare of man.

But this is not all for which Americans can be thankful. Our blessings have been manifold and for these we should pause tomorrow and give thanks.

PHYSICAL SLACKERS

A medical man, Dr. Harold J. Reilly of Philadelphia, is more concerned about the physical deficiencies of the American people than about the menace of fifth columnists. "A pushover for a germ is worse than a spy," says Dr. Reilly, and he goes on to report that "even the army loses more men from sickness and disease than from guns."

The tragic circumstance about this condition, if true, is that much of an individual's physical weakness is his own fault. Many, as Dr. Reilly says, are "physical slackers." The rules of health are reasonably simple, by no great hardship, and backed by the best authorities in the world. Yet most persons give them only casual respect and obedience.

So when young men are called into the country's service by a selective draft, the first problem is to make them fit for hard work and military discipline. Disease and physical weakness cost the nation far more than defensive preparations. Not only the nation as a whole but individuals pay the price.

Other peoples, especially in ancient times, considered good physical condition an honorable and admirable achievement. The modern world's straining for other objectives has set aside this desire to be fit, and free from physical weakness and suffering. But it is still profoundly true, as Izaak Walton wrote, that "health is the second blessing that mortals are capable of; a blessing that money cannot buy."

exceeded all expectations. The display of antique quilts also was quite large.

The displays of art work and health posters by the pupils of the grade schools provided an amazing collection of school work.

Hundreds of visitors viewed the exhibits Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and the programs rendered by pupils on Thursday and Friday evenings attracted a large number of persons.

Judges were County Agent William F. Greenawald, Doylestown, and Samuel L. Horst, Norristown, supervisor of vocational agriculture, who judged farm products and vocational exhibits; Miss Ericson, home economics worker of Northampton county, household products, and Miss Elsie Bartlett, supervisor of art in the Sell-Perk high school, art work and school exhibits.

Friday evening's program was attended by an overflow audience. This program, in charge of Miss Lucille Mahberry, director of music in the township schools, opened with three numbers by the high school boys' chorus, "Shortenin' Bread," "Ade Ade" and "Water Boy."

A tonette band, composed of about 30 grade school pupils, rendered a number of selections. This was followed by three selections by the high school girls' chorus, "Zigana Maid," "Our Clock" and "Good Night."

After several accordion selections by Miss Dorothy Raub, a pageant, "Our American Music" was given by about 100 pupils of the grade schools.

COURIER MANAGEMENT The Great Game of Politics

free from danger. Nevertheless there is a big, vital job to be done for which the ordinary Fat Cat politician or campaign contributor is particularly unqualified. Today the post calls for tact, courage, sympathetic understanding and clear-headed competency to a very high degree.

It these reasons it was encouraging to have the President say the other day that the idea of sending Mr. Marshall Field 3d to England had not been considered by him. Young Mr. Field was a strong Roosevelt supporter in the recent campaign and is now understood to be the financial angel of the newest New York newspaper, whose campaign against Mr. Willkie was quite the dirtiest waged by any pro-Roosevelt journalistic supporter in the country—and, despite the loud post-election claims that the press was solidly against Mr. Roosevelt, there were a number such. Also Mr. Field is enormously wealthy, but if he has any other qualifications for so important a post at so critical a period no one has mentioned them. Anyhow, there is a good deal of doubt among those who know him best that he wants the appointment.

It is reasonable to accept the President's request of General Pershing to go to France, before he named Admiral Leahy, as indicative of his intention not to fill these vacant ambassadorships with ordinary men. And it is to be regretted that the general's age and health made it impossible for him to accept. It would be difficult to imagine a better representative at this particular time, because the condition of the French people is pitiable in the extreme. There was never a time in French history when an outstanding, sympathetic American personality was more terribly needed in that country. Crushed by the German conqueror, unarmed and helpless, many millions of French people face famine and disease as well as enslavement. But above and beyond all, the dreadful thing about their situation is its hopelessness.

WITH the puppet government at Vichy wholly subservient to the German will, there is nothing in France to which Frenchmen can look with hope. When the American Ambassador, Mr. Bullitt, came home, the French felt genuinely deserted. The presence at Vichy of such an American representative as Admiral Leahy will have a tonic effect upon French morale. It will hearten them to look forward to the day when, again allied with England, they can throw off the Nazi yoke and be free. It will also give the United States an adequate and much-needed listening post.

—o—

ALSO it will be reassuring if the President promotes Mr. Alexander Kirk to an ambassadorship in Italy. As charge Mr. Kirk did a good job under hard conditions in Berlin, and he does as well as any charge could now at Rome, as an Ambassador, he would have vastly more weight and usefulness. But it is the English post which is of particular concern. The Leahy appointment and the Pershing offer are reassuring as to that.

"TRIAL WITHOUT JURY"

By JAMES RONALD

CHAPTER THIRTY-ONE

Stephen's funds were running low. Only about fifty or sixty dollars were left to his credit at the bank. It was urgent that he obtain more money within a few days. But from what source could it be obtained?

To approach Octavia's lawyers was out of the question. Knowing all the time what they were thinking about that murder, the interview would be intolerable. They were probably expecting him to come to them; and making up their minds what answer to give him.

His bank? He had had an account with it for twenty-four years, and in all that time had not once been overdrawn. The manager had always been friendly, had seemed to appreciate the straightforwardness of his small affairs. Surely he would be willing to allow him a reasonable loan?

The matter was urgent, so early that afternoon Stephen went to Bradbury and called upon the bank that carried his account. He was shown into the private office of the president, who expressed the formal hope that all Stephen's family were well and cordially with him on the death of his sister. When Stephen broached the subject of his visit, the president gave him no help. He put his fingertips together and listened in silence with a blank face to his client's halting request. After Stephen had managed to blurt it out, the banker still made no remark for what seemed to his client an interminable period. He frowned and adjusted his spectacles.

"A loan of five hundred dollars," he said at last in a dry, impersonal tone. "You have not stated what security you propose to offer."

"I can offer no security," said Stephen, reddening, "but—"

He passed the lawyer's letter across the desk and the banker read it with raised eyebrows.

"I am afraid," he said, "the bank could not consider advancing such a sum without security unless you could find some person of substance—this law firm, for instance—to guarantee the advance."

"That is one of the question. There is no one I am prepared to ask."

"You have a daughter who is of age, have you not?"

"But?" Stephen smiled slightly. "I am afraid Dorothy is not a person of substance. You would hardly be likely to regard her as a suitable guarantor for a loan."

The bank president coughed. With one hand he stroked his chin and with the other he drummed lightly on the desk.

"She is—er—a residuary legatee under the will of your sister."

For some moments Stephen did not comprehend what the banker was getting at. When realization dawned, he gasped and his face turned very pale. His mouth opened, but he did not speak. With a visible effort he stumbled to his feet. He put out a shaking hand which groped over the desk before it found the letter. He was trying to fold the letter, he made a ragged tear in it. The banker said something in an apologetic tone, but Stephen did not hear. He turned and went blindly out of the room.

She cradled his head on her bosom and soothed him as though he were a little child.

"Don't think of it any more, Stephen, my darling. And don't worry about money. I knew we should need some and I've arranged to sell the bonds mother left me. A thousand dollars will last us a long time."

"But—Edith!" he protested. "That is your own little nest-egg. We agreed never to touch it—"

"There is no 'mine' or 'thine' in family life, Stephen, my dear. We need the money and that's all there is to it."

After a pause, Edith said: "Stephen, there's something I've been meaning to speak to you about. We ought to move. It isn't only the curiosity-seekers flock here to see; it's the house in which the murder was done, as much as anything. Well, let them have the house—we'll find another."

"Yes, we ought to move," agreed Stephen hoarsely.

The following day they began house-hunting. They chose a quiet suburb of Bradbury, on the far side of that sprawling city from that on which Lakelawn was situated. In the afternoon they found a medium-sized house with a pleasant garden which seemed reasonably suited to their requirements. They returned to the agent from whom they had obtained the keys and enquired about the rent. It was higher than their present rent, but they had expected that.

"I think we'll take it," said Edith, after a consultation with her husband.

"You are very wise, madam," said the agent with professional enthusiasm. "It's a good solid residence, built at a time when houses were built, not thrown together and held up by the wallpaper. Thoroughly modernized, too, with every convenience you could reasonably ask for. And the neighborhood's good. I live in it myself. Up-to-date stores. A fine park. Good schools. You didn't say whether you have a family, Mr.—"

The agent glanced at Stephen's card and his face changed. His gaze travelled from the card to Stephen and from Stephen to Edith. There was an uncomfortable pause.

"I—er—will you excuse me for a moment?"

He was gone for a few minutes, and when he returned he was frowning and shaking his head.

"This is very unfortunate, very unfortunate indeed. I must apologize, Mr. Osborne; a stupid blunder has been made. My assistant—careless of him, incredibly careless—I'm afraid he sent you on a fool's errand. That particular house was taken only the other day."

"But the rent sign is still up!"

"No doubt, sir. Probably my workman has not found time to take it down. You know what these fellows are."

"I see."

Stephen bit his lip and looked at Edith.

"There is a card in your window advertising a house in Eden Road which might suit us," she said.

"Eden Road . . . Let me see. Oh, that! That house is in rather bad repair. And the landlord positively refuses to do anything to it. You'd have to spend hundreds on it to make it decently habitable."

The agent rubbed his chin doubtfully. "As a matter of fact, I don't think there's a house on my books that would suit you."

Suddenly the truth dawned upon Stephen.

"What you really mean is that you won't rent me a house because I'm involved in a murder investigation."

"You put it bluntly, Mr. Osborne. I hesitate to say so, but that is roughly the position. It isn't me, I'm sure I have nothing against you, nothing whatever. It's the owners of the properties. They wouldn't allow it. People talk, you know."

"If—if we changed our name—"

"It wouldn't work, Mr. Osborne. They'd find out soon enough who you were. They'd say—he coughed apologetically—"they'd say there must be something in all these stories, or you wouldn't change your name, if you see what I mean. If you'll allow me to advise you, you'll hold on where you are."

A conference of the law was under way. The discussion went in this wise:

"I still think Stephen Osborne did it. He had lost his job and was desperate when she refused to help him. He owed her a grudge for having done him out of his inheritance all those years. He claims to have been in the garden at the time of the murder but we have only his word for it: no one saw him there. Besides, it's only a step from the garden to the living room through the French windows and he could have done it in a matter of seconds."

"Let's not overlook the point that there was oil on the scarf. It seems to me that that is a feature of the case to which none of us has paid sufficient attention. It's agreed, more or less, that the oil must have got on the scarf from Michael's hands, but I think we've been too quick to accept his explanation. No normal lad is going to absent-mindedly wipe his oily hands on an expensive silk scarf. I think this is what happened: coming in from the shed where he kept his old car, 'Mike' looked in through the open door of the living-room and saw his aunt sitting there with her back to him. At the same time he noticed the scarf lying in the hall. At his age, a boy is keen to be a man. 'Mike' had heard his aunt abusing his father at lunch and threatening to cut him out of her will. In some twisted way he must have felt that to avenge the insults and prevent her from disinheriting his father her death would be a justifiable, even manly, action. He picked up the scarf and—"

"We mustn't lose sight of the fact that the dead woman would have been out of the house an hour and a half before the time of the murder had not Edith Osborne persuaded her to stay until four. To my mind, that's significant. She hated the old woman, who had been the cause of a terrible scene. It would be natural to want to be rid of her as soon as possible. And yet, she coaxed her to remain a little longer. Why? Edith Osborne is a strong-minded woman and devoted to her family. There's probably nothing she wouldn't do for the sake of her husband and the children—"

"Talking about strong-minded women, what about Hannah, the maid? She, too, hated the dead woman; and not even the mother is more devoted to the family than she. Murder would not readily occur to a lady like Edith Osborne, but Hannah Gale is of the type that goes in for direct action, the type that thinks with its hands. A whole-hogger, utterly devoted to her employers, utterly ruthless in her hatred of anyone who would harm them—"

Setwings Opens Training School For Defense Work

The first is a riveting room; and, that for beginners in sheet metal work; and the third for advanced training. One-fourth of the floor space of the hangar is given over to work-rooms, it being sufficient for training the eventual 200,000 men in the service. An additional 1600 square feet is required for office, tool and recreation rooms. On the second or is the related subjects class-rooms, are taught drawings related to craft subjects; and the use of intricate tools such as the micrometer, projector, etc. Ralph A. deDonato is director of the setwings school, with two instructors aiding. W. S. Clark is in charge sheet metal training, and Thomas J. O'Connell is in charge of the related subjects. The enrollment increases two additional instructors will be engaged. The young men will possibly remain three months of intensive training, giving eight hours a day, and seven days a week to the task. "At the conclusion of the training period they will be A-1 apprentices, and will have more suitable background for aviation work," stated Mr. deDonato today. In the classroom for related subjects, there will also be given some elementary instruction in mathematics, he students are starting references to the subject which they hope to gradually build up. Approximately two hours daily are spent in this classroom, with the remainder of the day on practical work. In the classroom on the second floor fluorescent lighting equipment has been installed.

Riveting and sheet metal subjects are not the only things considered in the classroom, but some time is given to thought of good citizenship. Thus the young men are given a fine slant in life, and have instilled the privileges of being a part of this great country.

The classes at present are limited to residents of Bristol borough, but those from other sections may be accepted at a later date.

It is the hope of Mr. deDonato, his assistants and plant officials to later conduct night classes in the same quarters, teaching the same subjects to any setwings employees who care to attend.

Bristol Township Man Pleads Guilty To Three Charges

Five years. Sentence was suspended on two bills.

Louis Levin, 23, 448 East Wyoming avenue, Phila., who pleaded guilty to operating a motor vehicle after operating privileges had been revoked, was sentenced by Judge Boyer to pay the costs of prosecution and serve not less than 15 days nor more than two years.

He was arrested by Private James Harris, of the South Langhorne sub-station of the P. M. P., November 11, while operating his father's truck.

The defendant, who was paroled February 26 after serving a portion of six months to two years' prison term in the County Prison here following a larceny charge, paid a fine of $50 and he costs to a Justice of the Peace on a charge of displaying an operator's license other than his own to Private Harris.

The defendant's father paid a fine of $25 and the costs for permitting some one who did not have an operator's license to operate his truck.

The defendant told Private Harris, who was checking up on his speeding, that he drove because his father didn't feel well.

The defendant's license was revoked in November in 1939 following his appearance in court here before President Judge Hiram H. Keller in connection with the theft of beer coils.

"The Court is impressed that you don't have much respect for the law," warned Judge Boyer. "Anything is all right so long as you don't get caught."

"You are a young man and have paid dearly for your attempt to violate your parole," said Judge Boyer. "You were willing to take a chance and run the risk of having the restoration of your operator's license postponed for another year. The Court cannot suspend sentence because it is your second offense," said the Court.

The defendant was on parole for five years when arrested by Private Harris for the two motor violations, one of which was settled before a Justice of the Peace before coming to court.

Doyle Huff, 38, Yardley, who pleaded guilty to open lewdness before Judge Boyer on Monday afternoon, was given a suspended sentence on condition that he pay the costs of prosecution in monthly installments of $5 and move from the community within a month.

Private Charles J. Jones, of the South Langhorne sub-station of the P. M. P., arrested the defendant following a complaint by a Yardley officer.

With President Judge Hiram H. Keller and Judge Calvin S. Boyer on the bench, three paroles were granted.

Martin Kutt, 36, Almont, was paroled on condition that he does not molest his wife and that he remain sober.

He was sentenced September 18 to serve not less than two months nor more than one year.

His wife, Catherine Kutt, charged him with breaking into her home near Almont. His minimum sentence expired November 18.

Benjamin Passanante, 22, 1123 South 11th St., Phila., was paroled on condition that he pay the costs which amounted to $26.70.

He was charged with operating a motor vehicle after license had been revoked and was sentenced November 4. His minimum sentence expired November 19.

John Fikec, 48, Trevoze Heights, was paroled and the costs of prosecution were directed to be paid by the county. His minimum sentence expired November 18. FEMALE GRAPPLERS TO APPEAR, TRENTON ARENA

TRENTON, N. J., Nov. 27—A star-studded card will be offered at the Arena tonight to Central Jersey fans. A special attraction between female grapplers, a wadup bout between Paul Boesch, the popular favorite, and Lou Plummer, the surly Texan, and the team match free-for-all will be on tap for the customers and one of the merriest evenings in local mat history should result.

Hazel Forbes, brunet, will face a blond newcomer in Miss Carol Starr, Arizona athlete competing for the first time in this vicinity. Both girls are desirous of a match with Miss Mildred Burke, the female champion, and one of the fastest and most exciting bouts should ensue.

Another top-notch encounter will ensue when Boesch meets Plummer. Lou was in an unusual light last Wednesday when the fans made him their favorite over Ernie Dusek. This so upset Lou that he was not himself and Ernie scored the only fall, although every fan present believed that it was a "rolling fall," something that should not have been charged against him.

Paul is returning after an absence of several years. He toured New Zealand and Australia where he was very popular.

The winning free-for-all team of Chief Chewacki and Eddie Newman have now won three straight team matches but they face rough opposition when they clash with Tommy Rae, the scientific New Englander, and Henry Kulkovich, the rowdy Pole.

Carl Grey, the youngster, who turned in an exceptionally fine performance in holding Emil Dusek even last week, returns against Ed Cook, the former grid star at Iowa.

The first bout will start at 8.30 p. m.

WYNMOOR ACES TO OPPOSE DIAMOND XI.

Joe Diamanti's Diamond Sporting Club footballers will be home for this Thanksgiving Day. It will mark the first time that the Diamond team will play on its home field on this holiday. The opponent chosen for the fray will be the Wynmoor Aces.

The Diamond team, claimants to the Bucks County championship, attempted to arrange a game with Doylestown and when this was found impossible, booked the Wynmoor Aces.

The Aces have clinched the championship of the Main Line Conference, which includes such teams as Darby, Upper Darby, Media, and Lansdowne. To date the Big Green of Andalusia is sporting a winning streak of seven straight games and have dropped but one verdict all season. Norristown beating it, 6-0, in the season's opener.

Coach Diamanti has also arranged for a game with Falls Almudi, to be played on Mitchell's field, Andalusia, on Sunday.

For the Wynmoor contest, Coach Diamanti intends to start as ends, Swadish and Roberts; tackles, Gullatto and Smith; guards, Belinski and Smuck; center, Fisher; quarterback, McFarland; halfbacks, Harper and Midge; fullback, Belinski.

Kickoff is scheduled for 2.30 o'clock.

DEVER SCHEDULED TO MEET BLAKE IN NEW YORK

Lenny Dever, lightweight, will make his first appearance in Madison Square Garden, New York, January 17th, when he will trade punches with Harris Blake, Buffalo negro, in one of the six-round preliminary bouts on the Henry Armstrong-Fritzie Zinn welterweight championship card.

Dever won a technical knockout in August over Blake when the referee stopped the bout in the fourth round. The negro puncher had received a badly cut eye after stopping a left hook.

Since then Blake has been after a return match. He packs plenty of power in both hands, but lacks Dever's all-around boxing skill and finesse.

Dever stopped Jimmy Pancaster in two rounds in his New York debut earlier in the year. His return match with Blake pits him against a fighter who holds decisions over Tony Canzonieri, Frankie Wallace, Marment Quarles, and many other top-notch lightweights.

responsibility for the killing of Codreanu and 12 of his followers, the 64 were shot down in the court yard of the military prison at Jilavy at 1.30 a. m.

(Information reaching Budapest said the political prisoners blamed for Codreanu's death were "assassinated in their cells.")

Victims of the mass execution, which was heralded as the "first stage of a major purge to come," were sentenced to death by a special court operating under the Iron Guard regime of Premier Antonescu.

After the death sentences were carried out, the exhumed body of Codreanu was placed in a church, where it lay in state while thousands of Iron Guardist mourners passed by.

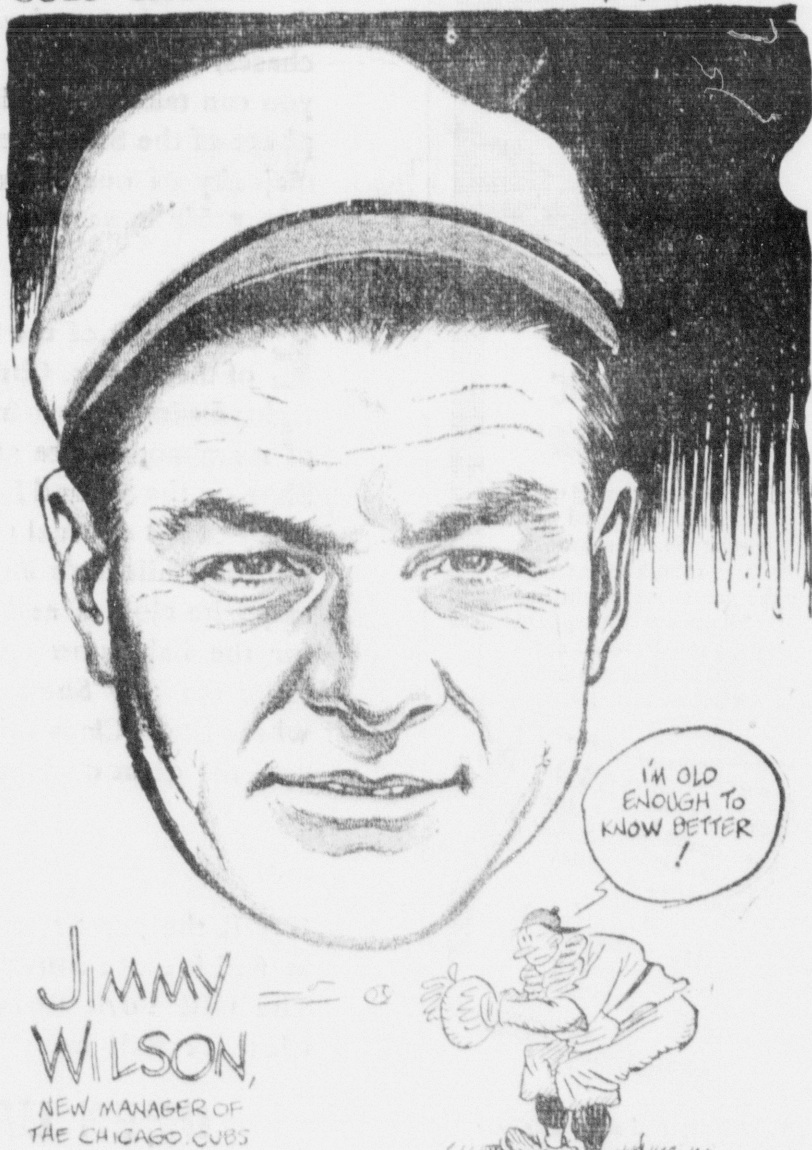

Officials said a state funeral will be held for the "martyred" Iron Guard leader in the near future.

Phillips Mill Theatre To Open First Dramatic Season

The Phillips Mill Theatre of New Hope will open its first dramatic season Friday night with George Bernard Shaw's scintillating comedy, "Arms and the Man" at Phillips Mill. The Shawian comedy will also be presented Saturday evening.

William Price, former Hedgerow Theatre star, not only is staging this production of "Arms and the Man," but also plays the typically Shavian hero, Bluntschli, a professional Swiss soldier. Ruth Hovey, former professional actress, who is the wife of Robert Gellert of Jericho Valley, will act the leading feminine role, of Raina. Miss Hovey last appeared with Jane Cowl in "First Lady." Others in the cast are Katherine Faulkner; Mary Marshall; Arthur Washburn of the Soleybury School; Laurie York Erskine, noted author; Alfred Wade, of the Princeton Players, and William Delaney. Robert Miller, well-known Delaware Valley artist, has designed the settings.

"Arms and the Man" is one of G. B. Shaw's best known plays. Although written more than 40 years ago, its comedy and Shavian wisdom are particularly applicable to present day Europe. The story, which is the basis of Oscar Straus' tuneful musical, "The Chocolate Soldier," tells of a professional battler who blunders into the home of an enemy general, where he does some fancy undecieving as to the romantic side of modern warfare.

By Jack W. Gill

Driven nearly to despair in one of the most disastrous years in football history at Bristol High School, eleven Cardinal and Grey football warriors representing the once scampering Bunny will strive to "floor the champ" tomorrow morning on the Bristol field.

The white Bunny is a far plucked rabbit this year. But the Bunny always has a nip left for a tough Bulldog from Morrisville no matter what has happened before. Regardless of how the season has gone, comparative scoring records, deeds and accomplishments are thrown to the wind. This Turkey Day affair will be no varying exception.

For thirteen years these two bitter rivals have been fighting it out on Thanksgiving morning. On nine occasions since that 1928 opener, Bristol has won the ball game, one has been tied and only two were dropped.

A flimsy form sheet that has been fickle all during the hectic 1940 grid year hands the game to Morrisville on a silver platter. Practically every team that Bristol has lost to with the exception of Burlington, Morrisville has beaten. Three of the better known teams were Langhorne, Conshohocken and Bensalem.

It's a championship Bulldog that has won six games and tallied 119 points against a conference cellar dwelling eleven that has won but one game and has scored but 25 measly points.

Starting out the campaign with a world of potential backfield power, Bristol came close to scoring against Trenton Catholic only to lose by a touchdown, ran wild between the twenty yard lines in battling a losing game to Bensalem, outplayed Conshohocken in a 13 to 7 loss and finally hit a jackpot in beating the P. S. D. outfit, 12-0. But it bogged again in the next fray losing to Langhorne, almost came through often in bowing to Burlington and took it on the chin proper from Bridgeport. Through it all, you have to admit that Bristol has had a sour season.

One game looms uppermost in Cardinal fans' minds. Among the hundreds of former players, old grads and fans who will pack Bristol's stands tomorrow morning there will be those who saw Bristol grimly wage a heart-rendering battle against a powerful Burlington outfit. Two breaks that backfired into miserable bobbles might have either tied or won the game for Coach Tom Cannon's crew.

Dreaming of yesterday when Bristol used to hold the upper hand stiff in the tense arch rivalry that grips the two towns in everything from a ball game to a billiard match, Bunny supporters are pulling for a repetition of what occurred at Burlington. However, it seems that such a display will be one of raw courage only. Bristol simply doesn't have it this year, while Morrisville does.

Two highly advertised backs, Clem Peterpaul, Bristol's battering line cracker, and zooming Bob Pursell, a jaw running Morrisville fullback with plenty of fast charge, have been labeled as the boys to watch in this year's classic. With these two boys groomed for a good day's work hitting the line do not be surprised to find a brisk defensive ball game settling between the rival lines. In fact, it appears evident that the game will be won or lost up front.

Morrisville is hard to stop once it gets its blocking up offensively. Only once this season has Morrisville possessed that split precision energy displacement phase in a night ball game against Conshohocken. Little Bobby Keys, a mere nite of a lad, does much of the hard work in the blocking department. Then too, Bristol will undoubtedly see plenty of end sweeps starting wide around the ends. The passing, once one of their chief weapons, has not been up to par thus far.

The Blue and Gold has a steady line that is not brilliant in any sense of the word. Against Burlington Bristol's played a much better brand of ball, yet on the offense, Morrisville's line seems to have a charging edge over that of the Cards. Chick Hulse and Beadle are fine wingmen and LaRue, a Bronze and Captain Gandleman form a keystone in the center. Clemens at tackle is a 238 pound junior.

In a desperate effort to shake loose a broken field runner this year, if only in the grand finale, Coach Tom Cam-

PLAYERS AND HEAD COACHES ALL CONFIDENT OF WINNING

By Jack W. Gill

A Tuesday evening tour of Lower Bucks schoolboy practice fields found confidence the keynote in all camps. Hard work and plenty of zip found the boys facing their biggest fray of the season with an outlook of supreme satisfaction.

Captain Spezzano, Bristol: "Notwithstanding the past history of Bristol, I believe we are capable of taking over Morrisville by at least two touchdowns. They are overconfident and expect an easy victory, but we are determined and we are going to win. Morrisville will find it tough against our defense and just as rough if not tougher against our offense."

Captain Gandleman, Morrisville: "The team is in excellent shape, both physically and mentally. We have been looking forward to this game since the start of the season and we will be out to avenge the defeat we suffered last year."

Coach Campion, Bristol: "In order for any type of a team to win a contest it must have the 'will to win.' This feeling must come from within each player. This spirit has been lacking all season at Bristol. We hope that it will come forth Thursday morning against Morrisville. The ability has been here all season. If the 'will to win' arrives we WILL win."

Coach Hoffman, Morrisville: "Morrisville is looking forward to the Bristol game as one of the hardest on its schedule. We will be at full strength for the game. Although Bristol has looked bad in a few of their frays this year, they always reach their peak against us. We will have to turn in our best game if we expect to win."

Captain Pidcock, Newtown: "We have a good team and are in shape. It ought to be a tough battle, but we should take Langhorne by three touchdowns."

Co-Captain Driver, Newtown: "I think we should beat them by four touchdowns. If we do not get overconfident we should 'go to town.' Our line is strong and our pass offense is clicking."

Captain Gotwald, Langhorne: "This should be our best and most evenly matched game of the season. We will be at full strength for the first time since the Bristol game. What's more, we are all set for Driver and Company."

Coach Fox, Newtown: "We have been working hard and are in fine physical shape. We have been fairly successful this year, winning five, losing three and tying one game. Of course we are hoping to take Langhorne and will do our utmost to make the ball game an 'interesting' one. Langhorne, it seems, has a better team this year than they did last season and we are expecting some real opposition. Thursday morning will decide. May the better team win."

Coach Beck, Langhorne: "Langhorne has had an 'in and out' season this year, winning three, tying one and losing four. After such a poor season as last year we have been considerably cheered by this record. The win over Bristol for the first time in our school's history will make this season a memorable one. As usual, both teams will play over their heads Thursday, which should make the game interesting throughout for old grads and spectators. Let the better team win."

pion, who last season shared the conference championship and this fall, with almost the same set of backs, can't get out of last place, will start sprightly Keith Rosser at left halfback. He's the kid who went 60 yards on a punt return against Burlington. Another sweeping change will find Capriotti starting at the other halfback post. Clem Peterpaul and Pete Spezzano, elected captain for this fray, are the only holdovers.

Should the Cardinals click on their passing as they did against Burlington, their chances of an upset would be considerably brighter. They have the upper hand in the air, and they can draw the defense in by allowing Peterpaul to slide off tackle often.

Readily admitting that the "stuff is there" in the Bristol line-up, Head Coach Campion makes no prediction as to the outcome. Neither does Hoffman, who fears overconfidence. After Tuesday night's scrimmage session that wound up in a biting hailstorm, Campion let loose a statement that may have effect tomorrow morning. "If those kids play ball Thanksgiving Day like they did out there tonight, we'll click. And once we start moving we'll be hard to stop." Meaning that Bristol could do much in a one game affair. But Campion, as well as hundreds of other followers, have been waiting for that all season.

Student morale, always a key factor in rivalry affairs, hit a fever pitch tempo in both towns early this week. Morrisville, with a hot ball club, is coming to town tomorrow with all it can muster.

The highwater scoring mark for the series that enters its thirteenth year this week was a 32 to 2 triumph rung up by the 1930 ensemble. Morrisville's 26 to 6 verdict, a story of Yeager, Margerum, Reitzle and Company, broke a ten year jinx and started Morrisville on the upswing. Now it's getting tougher and tougher for Bristol to muzzle the ferocious Bulldog.

This year? Nothing in the way of a large score triumph for either side looms in the outcome. Morrisville, on record, is favored by perhaps one score, but do not discount the tremendous determination that is traceable to a high morale. Foreseeing a battle of rival lines, it would not surprise many to find a tie resulting.

A backfield stuck in the mud all year that has huffed and snorted between the 10 yard lines is Bristol's hope. Thursday, Morrisville banks all on the "pilot light" leader, Bobby Pursell, and the ability of their forward wall to put a halt to the ground running efforts of powerful Clem "the mound" Peterpaul.

LANGHORNE CLASHES WITH NEWTOWN FOE

Among the football games on tap Thanksgiving Day morning in scholastic football ranks is Langhorne High who plays host to Newtown in the thirteenth meeting between the two schools since 1928 at Langhorne.

Bensalem and the Alumni, another annual affair, hook horns in a Turkey Day duel down at Cornwells Heights. Two thousand fans are expected at Langhorne where the traditional arch-rivals clash in one of the most interesting frays of the season for each team. Newtown, on the basis of its perfected aerial attack featuring Clarence Pidcock and Al Driver, is favored to annex honors for the second successive year. Langhorne holds a dominant upper hand in the 13 year series having won seven games to Newtown's four. Two games were tie affairs. The Redskins rely heavily upon their ace back, Warren Gotwald, to pull an upset victory Thursday.

The Owls will be facing a galaxy of stars in the old grads at Cornwells Heights. Both games begin at 10 o'clock.

SO. LANGHORNE OPPOSES BRISTOL A. A. TOMORROW

The Bristol A. A. and South Langhorne Aces will battle on the Bristol high school field on Thanksgiving Day at 2:30 p. m. This game is causing great excitement and the largest crowd ever to see a professional game will be on hand. Tickets are being sold and sales point to a capacity crowd. Coach Zefferies' boys have been "going great" the last four weeks, while Coach Carter's team which holds a victory over the A. A. team earlier in the season 8 to 9, says he is going to repeat.

The starting lineup for the A. A. team will be: Bianco and Plebani at ends; Corcoran and Profy at tackles; Ed Bartle and Sak at guards; Pat McGee at center; Dougherty, Breslin, Dugan, McGovern in the backfield. Coach Zefferies will have in reserve: Lon McGee, Ussit, Kirsten, Mount, Lemon, Orino. This will be the A. A.'s final game of the season.

BASKETBALL FANS PREDICT CLOSE BATTLE TONIGHT

Profy Team Scheduled to Meet The Fifth Ward Sporting Club

MANHATTAN VS. VOLTZ

Pico Expects His Team To Go On Another Scoring Spree Tonight

Basketball fans of this section are predicting a close battle tonight as the Profy team, champions of 1939-40, meet the Fifth Ward Sporting Club, in the first tilt of the doubleheader scheduled for the Mutual Aid floor. In the other game, Manhattan meets Voltz-Texaco.

Fifth Ward, a new aggregation in the circuit, proved very impressive in its start last week as the quintet trounced the Voltz-Texaco team. The boys of Ray Pico showed fine teamwork and were able to muster 42 points.

Coach Pico expects his boys to go on another scoring spree tonight and will start five former Bristol high school players in Florito, DeLissio, Pica, Piebani and Mayo. Florito and Pica led the scorers in the opening game.

However, Fifth Ward has Johnny Slaven and his boys to contend with. The Profy club is coached by "Gig" Dougherty and in its opening fracas beat out Manhattan. The radiomen began in fine style but could not stop a Manhattan rally which brought the score close.

Dougherty will have in his starting five: Ray Dorsey, Buck Profy, Hughes Slaven, and Klein. On his reserve list is Teddy Sak, Vince Profy, and Gus Carnvale, the latter being one of the best foul shots in the loop.

Voltz-Texaco is out to get on the winning side of the ledger. This team, a last-minute entry into the circuit, did not have much chance to get in any practice sessions until last week and Manager Cooper is predicting a different story than the one issued last week.

Cooper now feels that Harry Berry and Hutchinson will begin to hit the boards more sharply and with himself and the two Adam boys should round up a fine quintet.

Manhattan showed up well in the second half of its game with Profy last week and is picked to win over Voltz. Manager Jimmy Dugan will have the following in his starting lineup: Punkie Zefferies, Maurice Mulligan, Brock Harkins, Hufnell, and Snyder.

First game starts at eight o'clock sharp.

RATCLIFFE HIGH FOR BRISTOL BOWLING CLUB

Bristol Bowling Club took four points from Badenhausen. Ratcliffe was high for B. B. C. with 515. For Badenhausen, Jones was high with a total of 535.

J. A. C. took four points from the Cucumbers. For J. A. C., Carlen was high with 523 for the winners, while Baehser was high for Cucumbers with 549.

Travelers dropped three points to the powerful Rohm & Haas team. For the Travelers, Christopher hit a series for 562. For the "chemical workers" Foell was high with 519.

Burlington dropped three points to the Bell All-Stars. For Burlington, Amisson hit the highest series, adding to a total of 628. For Bell's All-Stars, Bailey was high with 532.
